TO FATHERS

We, as a sentimental folk, must follow up that day when Mother is crowned with laurels, by seeing that Father comes into his deserved own. It might have been more prudent to take the two Sultans, one in May and the other in June, consolidate and have "Parent's Day" when both loved ones divide the honors equally. But far be it from us to lessen the profits of business! There would be the purchasing of one combined gift for Dad and Mother, the buying of one card for the parents, the sending of one pot of flowers for the family garden. The necktie and hosier manufacturers would have to give the household appliance dealers a break, for how often Father has come in for a share of an electric waffle-iron or dip-iron. Many a dad has shares in a new lamp for the living-room and a half interest in a pair of sandals at Christmas. We know of one fellow who was satisfied with a bit of stock in a washing machine and we believe he is looking for a family gift of an electric ironer from Santa's copious pack next winter. So perhaps we should let him have his day, undivided in honor, when such a deserving fellow comes into his socks, shirts and pajamas, to share with no one, not even a grown son who wears the same size! What difference if colors are too loud, socks too large, necks too small. All will work out. The idea is to give Father respect and tribute, to make him know what joy it has given you to be his father. Now, the love and fellowship of such a good fellow. Now is the time to say it!

GETTING MARRIED

The marriage custom is followed during all the year, but we figure June as the month of brides. This is our opportunity to express a few personal opinions on the most sacred and important custom.
What concerns the nation regarding the increased divorce rate does not concern us at this writing. We are considering the following of the paths of matrimony through life together. Few of us can say we have followed all the wisest and proudest paths ourselves, for often we have failed. But there is a lot of starting out on the right foot and that is what we are considering now. The present problem of whether a girl should marry until her young man has a desired position and a nice bank account, is of importance, but so is whether the chap's agreeable, fond of work, has good habits, can be relied upon and pays his bills as he goes along. He must take into consideration whether this girl will assume the responsibilities of maintaining a home and the cares of raising a family. The subject of marriage is not original with us, nor is advice. It has both been going on for a long time, and successfully, don't forget that. Marriage is not just for today and it stands a better chance of surviving tomorrow when both parties realize the necessity of co-operation and hard work, with a large dose of sacrifice thrown in. Marriage deserves the best of heart and mind from every young person who considers it.

'FEELING FINE'

"I'm feeling fine," boomed Governor Crome when they brought word to him that the legislature had adjourned.
Well, he ought to be. He's the victor of Florida. Before him, awaiting veto or approval, lies much of the "work" of the legislature. He can decide, absolutely and finally, how much of it to put into effect and after that the extent to which it becomes effective will depend entirely on his judgment and his whims.
This amazing situation was brought about by a supreme court ruling giving the governor detailed powers over the expenditure of state money and the action of the legislature making it necessary for him to use it. The supreme court held that the governor cannot be forced to sign check and the legislature put that up to his discretion by failing to provide for the necessary funds as much as it authorized him to pay out. Moreover, if left much of the authorized expenditures subject to his veto, the governor cannot first decide what he shall be authorized to spend and then check and veto as much of it as he likes, how much of that he will release.

Consider the situation as of today. The legislature passed one compromise gas tax bill the effect of which, as Representative Ferguson pointed out when they were up for final passage in the house, no one has yet made clear. The governor has 10 days in which to veto or sign it. He can toss them out for jokers. He can let them take effect, just as he wishes.

The legislature now prides for passing a road patrol bill that is before the governor. He can let it become a law or knock it out according to his pleasure. As he gets to name the bicycle riders and as it doesn't take any money to sign this treaty, he is expected to sign this one.

But it is not only with his veto power that he controls this. The legislature passed the Everglades fire control bill over his veto. All that is necessary to get the money is for him to sign the check and as he didn't sign one for the Everglades national park when the money was on hand, it isn't too difficult to see what he will do with the treasury here.

The legislature allowed some $13,000,000 for schools but didn't provide for the money. So there isn't any question what will happen there. The governor won't sign the check. He doesn't have to and it wouldn't be wise for him to. The governor has maintained that the state doesn't need a new tax. That it could get along just as well without the new tax. The legislature didn't repeal any of the present revenue. The legislature repealed the one-half of one cent gross receipt tax but that is also on the governor's veto desk. If he needs that $13,000,000 for what he intends to spend, a stroke of the pen will keep it coming.

From all this it can be seen that Governor Crome is sitting pretty. He is on top of the heap, boss of the whole works for the remainder of his term. What he says goes, and nothing else.

The remarkable part of it is that the governor didn't ask for it. He just sat in his office and let a re-volt legislature hand it to him. Other governors, in robust health and hot with ambition, have striven mightily and failed miserably to get even a semblance of that power from legislatures which they controlled. And here "Old Swagere" without lifting a finger, gets it in full measure. Peace! It's wonderful! — Fort Myers News-Press.

GOVERNOR CROM UNEXPECTED

As the atmosphere clears from the scenes of the 1939 session of the Florida Legislature, reason has become evident why the citizens should be well pleased with the results. It may be true that the interests may have caused for disappointment over their failure to get through pet measures. It may be true that some departments of the State Government may be pinched a bit because the legislature did the appropriate thing. It also may be true that certain new projects contemplated must be postponed for a few years. But the people of Florida as a whole will be the beneficiaries of the economies that are thus forced upon the man who administers public affairs. But there will be no permanent injury to anyone or to any group that may be forced to economize for the next two years in order to make ends meet. Fact is, the lesson that is to be learned through such an experience should have its beneficial effects. Usually such is the case with individuals, and it is not unreasonable to expect that individual experience may be applied with profit to governmental units, bureaus, commissions, agencies, or whatever it is that spend the public funds.

A retrospective view of the session reveals two things that stand out prominently. The first is Governor Crome's first stand against the levying of additional taxes upon citizens and the respect the legislators showed for his wishes in this connection. The Governor, who knows the value of the tax dollar, has adhered to a straight and narrow course while he has piloted the "Ship of State," and has maintained with firmness that no expenditures in excess are needed to finance legitimate functions of State Government. It is consistently planned for greater economy on the part of those who spend public money.

This is a course that is not at all popular with those who argue that expenditures in ever-increasing amounts demand progress. But the people, the taxpayers, the voters of the Government, are not in accord with this fallacious theory. They believe that administration of public business is in no sense a government function, but rather a private enterprise, or of household affairs. They contend that there are times when the use of common sense in the use of their money would be "prevalent" in the handling of public affairs, as prevail in private affairs. The people agree with Governor Crome's demands for economy, and laud his firm stand against the levy of additional taxes.

Another phase of the work of the legislators that stands out prominently is the fact that they did their duty collectively according to the dictates of their consciences as prompted by the wishes of their constituents. Naturalists may had to beg in mind the demands made upon them by the people "back home." Such demands too often are responsible for the defeat of the better judgment of those responsible for the enactment of laws, for the setting up of new governmental functions, and the appropriation of excessive amounts of money.

Law-makers, whether they be city councilmen, State legislators, or members of the National Congress, are human beings, like the rest of us. Consequently, they are influenced by the wishes of their friends, as well as that of the so-called pressure groups. These influences are responsible for many actions by every legislative body.

There is a particularly fortunate angle to the work of the 1939 Florida Legislature, however. It passed many measures, some of which called for large outlays of public funds, but it did not enact any laws calling for additional levies of taxes to finance the proposed expenditures. Another thing, the legislators were honest leaving with Governor Crome this mass of new legislation to dispose of according to the sound judgment that has characterized his handling of the people's business thus far during his administration. That this judgment will be exercised in behalf of the people as a whole may be judged by his preliminary pronouncement that "Florida will be in good financial condition when I get through with these bills."

The people will find a pleasing assurance in his scoffing at reports that the State will be several millions of dollars behind, and that he intends to veto every special appropriation and claim that the money isn't provided for, and that he has no intention of calling a special session of the Legislature.

After all the conditions and circumstances are surveyed and studied, the sound conclusion that should be reached is that everybody should be happy over the outcome, assuming that everybody believes in the theory of the American system of government, that is a "government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

Speaking of the results of the Legislature's efforts concerning the State as a whole, it may be said that they conform pretty well to this idea. Unfortunately, many cannot be said concerning the results of some of the local legislation that was put through affecting some of the individual counties—Jacksonville Times-Union.

From the times, "Short Talks," in the Florida Times-Union of May 26, we quote the following: "As has been the rule for years, the Everglades acres of Florida have contributed largely to the nation's food supply during the past winter and spring months. Hundreds, or rather thousands, of small carloads of vegetables are sent out from Everglades farms each year—most of the produce at a time when other parts of the State are short of such crops. With a tremendous acreage not yet brought under cultivation—yet potentially capable of supplying huge stores of a wide variety of foodstuffs, the Everglades lands of Florida hold great promises of future usefulness to the State and the Nation."

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY
By Russell Kay.

Well, the great Raspberry Festival is over and while things did not exactly turn out the way some folks would like to have it, nevertheless there was no great harm done. The Legislature tried its best to please everyone and if you ask me it did a swell job of it. One crowd wanted more and more appropriations and I mean they got 'em. Some wanted to be "alone" so they were taken care of very nicely. Nobody wanted any more taxes, and so the TAXPAYER was considered.

All in all the boys didn't do much but mill around and dope out a nice little financial cross-vote and then hand it over to Governor Fred to solve.

And right now Florida should be happy indeed that she has a Governor who is able and bold enough to do just that. All along he has insisted that we needed no more taxes. He pointed out that if things were left as they were we'd come out all right. "Thinking to force a 'sales tax' as an effort was made to appropriate so much that there would be another way out, but it didn't work and now all Fred has to do to put things in order is simply veto three little bills and we'll sail along in nice shape."

The hand writing on the wall at this time indicates that Governor Fred will exercise his veto power on the three measures. The bill repealing the one-half of one percent gross receipt tax, and the two on gas tax allocation—better known as "80-1" and "80-2." Of course, such action on his part might make a few folks terribly unhappy; but it means the bulk of the taxpayers and permit us to carry on just like we are doing.

The schools and the old folks who are getting old are getting the bills will be paid, and if they should get in the hole at any time here should be in the neighborhood of two million additional revenue in the Road Department and in a pinch Fred could call up Arthur Hale (just so Martin, Carlton and Sholtz did) and give him a nice "I.O.U." for the Road Department ought to be getting used to it by now and another million or two in "I.O.U.'s" should do no harm.

But Fred probably won't stop at just vetoing the three measures I mentioned. When he gets his pencil sharpened he may decide to veto a lot of other appropriations as well as that, which we consider unnecessary.

But you can depend on it, Fred was sincere and meant what he said when he told us not to worry as things would turn out all right. For the first time in a lot of folks are finding out that Fred is "right smart" governor. Papers that have ridiculed and laughed at him on other occasions are now singing his praise.

The lobby lizards are happy of course for they were very successful in getting appropriation bills passed and earned the money they got from the special interest.

terests they represent. At the same time, the fact that there is no money to meet 'em with is not their fault, so when Fred gets through with his little veto job they can all count on going back to Tallahassee in another two years and try again.

The "Tangle Situation" pointed to in much alarm by certain legislators and private interests has turned out to be just another bugaboo. No one has been hurt. We escaped the "sales tax" and are going to find in the end of the day that we are pretty well off. If we have to do a bit of economizing here and there it won't hurt us, and we'll find that business will go on as usual, the old folks will be cared for, the schools will stay open, and with Governor Fred looking after us we will continue to get by and at the same time keep on eatin' "a little higher up on the hog."

All if any of you folks are sitting around waitin' for Fred to call an extra session on account of the "emergency" well, another just waitin' your time and you might as well forget it and get back to your knittin'.

OPPOSITION SLACKENS

Persons opposing construction of the two migratory labor camps near Belle Glade apparently dropped plans to obtain an injunction against the projects after the town commission of Belle Glade went on record in favor of the camps at Wednesday's meeting.

Newman T. Miller, West Palm Beach attorney, had been retained by a group of Belle Glade opponents the two camps and a petition was circulated for signatures in advance of an injunction hearing.

Farm Security Administration officials in Belle Glade Wednesday reported that bids will be opened June 8 at Montgomery, contracts will be awarded by June 20 and work started within 60 days following. Construction of the camps is expected to require about five months.

Japan now has a twelve-hour day.

FISHING, SWIMMING IN CANAL IS BANNED BY BELLE GLADE COUNCIL

Proposals made by the Belle Glade Garden Club for the erection of two public drinking fountains in front of the new town hall were discussed at Wednesday's session of the Belle Glade town council. Mrs. James P. Scullin, representing the Garden Club, introduced the proposal and asked the council for its opinion. It was decided that the Garden Club, in cooperation with the Mayor will secure information on installation and costs from the Florida Power & Light Company. Karl Riddle, engineer for the PWA waterworks extension program, announced he had received a telegram from the manufacturer, supplying material for the new elevated water tank to be constructed on public park site, stating that they expect to ship the tank material "next Wednesday." Accordingly, the equipment will probably arrive in Belle Glade on or about June 17. Approximately 30 days will be required to erect the tank.

A request by the general contractor, Norman R. Latham and Company, for permission to submit the contract for erection of the tank to the manufacturer was discussed by the council. The town assented to the change in the form of a resolution allowing Taylor Iron & Supply Company to construct the tank but not withdrawing the full responsibility of construction from the general contractor. Cost of erection was stated as $7,500.

Mr. Riddle agreed to answer a letter from the PWA rejecting the town's request for reduction in cost of the waterworks extension program due to alteration of plans in the pipe-line extension. It is believed that the reduction will be obtained when it is explained to PWA that the only deduction to be made is on account of contract "A", which is already completed. Papers were signed providing for a 35 percent grant request from the government. The water department was given permission to sink a used Dunning pump to the Richmond Plumbing Company for $108.

Delinquent taxes on property belonging to G. A. Hubbell were adjusted by the council in accordance with previous adjustment made for two other taxpayers.

Upon the suggestion of Commissioner R. K. Harris, the chief of police was instructed to prohibit all fishing and swimming in the canal within the town limits. Signs to that effect will be placed at convenient intervals along the canal banks. No action was taken on proposals to sink a 100-foot well near the treating plant to supply water to the town treating system.

Proposals for sending two firemen to the Tenth Annual Florida State Fire College, to be held July 24-27, in Daytona Beach, were laid aside until next Wednesday's meeting.

Bills in the amount of $48.89 from the waterworks department and $230.00 from the town general fund were approved for payment.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

Times have changed since Polly Moran used to be a star, and the popular character player started learning about the change during the filming of "Ambush."

When Polly received her first check for her feature role in that picture, she raced to the cashiers' window. "You paid me too much," she accused him.

"No mahim," said the cashier. "That includes you pay for overtime."

"Well," commented Miss Moran, thinking of the checks she used to draw at the height of her popularity. "Why didn't they do things this way in the old days."

Mickey Rooney in "Huckleberry Finn"

Playing at the Everglades theatre in Belle Glade on Sunday and Monday and at the Prince theatre in Pahokee Tuesday night.

Mickey Rooney has his first solo starring vehicle, Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," successor to "Tom Sawyer." The new picture tells the story of a Mississippi River boy and his adventures, dramatic, comical, and pathetic, while seeking to add a runaway slave to escape to a free state in the days before the Civil War.

Mickey plays the title role, with the racially but comical "King" played by Walter Connolly and his fellow crook by William Frawley. Lynne Carver and Jo Ann Sayers play the heroines whom Huck saves by exposing the crooks.

Highlights include the absurd "Romeo and Juliet" performance with Connolly as "Romeo" and Rooney as Juliet, the negro's rescue of the boy when he is bitten by a snake, the steamer race up the river and accident, on a sand bar, and the lynching scene, with other details taken directly from the pages of the original book.
